Water from Cincinnati Water Works Flowing into South Lebanon Water Service Lowers Rates, Improves Water Quality

Cincinnati, OH – The Village of South Lebanon is now distributing water from Greater Cincinnati Water Works (GCWW) – a nationally recognized water utility known for providing high quality soft water.

The new wholesale water agreement is estimated to save the average South Lebanon household about $2.00 per month. Strong negotiation of a wholesale agreement with GCWW and a low interest loan from the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency are attributed to the rate reduction.

“This is a great day for the residents of South Lebanon,” said Village Mayor Jim Smith. “We are now receiving higher quality soft water at a reduced cost.”

Water service from GCWW is starting about 12 months ahead of schedule. South Lebanon entered into a 40-year wholesale water agreement with GCWW in 2009.

“Water will continue to flow to meet the growing needs of our community now and well into the future,” Smith added.

South Lebanon will continue to manage all water services including billing and water infrastructure maintenance.

Greater Cincinnati Water Works provides water to more than 1.1 million people in Hamilton, Butler, Warren and Clermont County, Ohio and Boone, County, Kentucky.
